the first time in the history of the country, the Government has been compelled to take such measures as those which have been adopted in order to meet the emergency. The Government has done its best to meet the situation as it has arisen, and to do what it could to alleviate the sufferings of the people. The Government has taken steps to provide relief to the people affected by the famine, and to help them to get back on their feet again. The Government has also taken steps to prevent the spread of disease among the people, and to ensure that they are not exposed to any danger.
The Government has also taken steps to ensure that the people are not exposed to any danger, and to ensure that they are not exposed to any danger.
